The Lineo T, the first Bürstner motorhome based on a Ford chassis

The Lineo T is Bürstner's answer to the increasing demand for compact motorhomes. Based on a Ford Transit heavy-duty chassis, the slimline semi-integrated low-profile model offers the "wohnfühlen" home away from home feel comfort inside that is typical for the brand and extends Bürstner's compact portfolio by another model range.

Düsseldorf. With the new Lineo T, the motorhome manufacturer Bürstner, which is based in Kehl, Germany, is once again extending its already very wide portfolio of compact vehicles. The new Lineo T, a slimline, semi-integrated low-profile motorhome based on a front drive Ford Transit with a heavy-duty chassis and an overall width of 220cm, is being launched just in time for the Caravan Salon. The first Ford-based Bürstner motorhome will be available with a choice of 130 to 155bhp engines.

The Lineo T's standard features include 16" tyres on steel wheels, radio-readiness, a 100l water and a 97l wastewater tank, as well as space for two 11kg gas bottles. The light, contemporary habitation is equipped with furniture in the functional as well as cosy Brava design and finish, which creates the wohnfühlen home away from home atmosphere that is typical for Bürstner in the vehicle interior.

Initially, the Lineo T will be offered in three compact layouts with a length from 660cm to 699cm:

Lineo T 620 G – length 660cm, single beds, garage, swivel seats, Vario washroom, wardrobes underneath the single beds and a full kitchen, including a 90l absorber refrigerator.

Lineo T 690 G – length 699cm, single beds, garage, swivel seats, Vario washroom, additional tall linen cupboard and plenty of storage space, and a 133l compressor refrigerator.

Lineo T 700 – length 699cm, free-standing queen-sized bed (optionally: with electric height adjustment), swivel seats, Vario washroom, wardrobe either side of the bed, additional tall linen cupboard, full kitchen with a 133l compressor refrigerator.

An extensive pack of extras is also available for the Lineo T. It includes, for example, a passenger airbag, aluminium window frames, a central locking premium-quality habitation door, a 40x40cm rooflight, an electric doorstep, an additional garage door as well as a lighting pack and a practical 230V socket in the rear garage.

This level of comfort can even be increased by ordering an "Active Pack" with 16" alloy wheels and a spoiler protection guard, as well as a Ford Comfort Pack with a heated windscreen, a rain sensor for the windscreen wipers, and various driver assistance systems.

At the Caravan Salon in Düsseldorf, you will find the new Bürstner Lineo T 690 G at the FORD stand in Hall 16. The other two layouts will be presented at a later date.
